from Laura Candler

What can you do with blank calendar pages? More than you might think! You can use them as a planning tool in your role as a teacher, and you can also use them with students. These pages are 8 1/2" by 11" which means they are perfect for storing in a 3-ring binder or notebook. Furthermore, the calendar blocks for Saturday and Sunday are reduced in width, providing more room for writing on the weekdays.

This free PDF version of the calendar has school-themed clipart; if you'd like to modify the pages, you can purchase the editable version from my TpT store. That version includes several styles of monthly calendars that you can print and use as is or customize with your own fonts and clipart.

Ways to Use The School Year Calendar

- Instructional Planning - Create instructional timelines for teaching specific subject areas or special thematic units.
- Personal Meeting Planner - Keep a copy of each month's calendar page in the front of your planbook to note important meetings and deadlines.
- Literature Circle Schedules - Give the calendar pages to students to use when planning their reading page assignments and meeting dates.
- Attendance Graphing - Have students track attendance and tardies by using stickers or color coding to identify dates that they arrive at school on time or after the tardy bell rings.
- Project Planning and Organization - Teach students to use the calendars to divide their projects into manageable segments. They can set mini-deadlines to keep themselves on track.
- Homework Planner - Have students jot down homework and other assignments for a single subject area.
- Classroom Event Calendar - Mark all your important events, test dates, and deadlines on one calendar page. Print and send home to parents to keep as a handy reference.
- Home Reading Log - Ask students to keep a monthly calendar in their homework folders to use for recording minutes of reading. Have parents fill in the minutes and initial each time their child reads.
